Seventy-One Leave Bucks County To Be Inducted Today

Call No. 12 under the Selective Service Act took into United States Army camps through the office of Local Board No. 1, today, 20 young men.

The 20 inductees left shortly before 10 o'clock, going first to the Philadelphia induction center, from where they will be assigned to camps.

Two of those to be inducted today will be the second young men in each of their families to enter the service during the past few months. Gene H. Nichols, of 116 Wood street, is one called to service for one year; while only a few weeks ago his brother, Chester Nichols, left for Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Nichols.

William Francis Hampton, 25, of 306 Buckley street, is the second in his family to enter the service, his younger brother, George Hampton, having enlisted about six months ago. George is now located at Fort Dix, N. J.

Those leaving this area on Call 12 are:

In the thirteenth call expected some time in August the 21-year-olds who registered last week will be among those called for physical examination.

A number of men called for induction today have been deferred because of the new Government ruling pertaining to those who have reached the age of 28 years.

TO BUILD LOWER SPAN OVER CANAL, MORRISVILLE

New Bridge Will Cost Approximately Forty Thousand Dollars

COST TO BE SHARED

MORRISVILLE, July 10 — A lower bridge which carries the Lincoln Highway over the canal is to be constructed here under an amended order of the Public Utility Commission. The work is to be completed July 1, 1942.

The new bridge will cost approximately $40,000, with Morrisville Borough, the State, Delaware Division Canal Company, Lehigh Navigation Coal Company, Pennsylvania Railroad Company, Bucks County and the State Highway Department sharing costs. Morrisville will pay $3,400 and one-third of land damages, which the State says will be $6,700 but which Morrisville officials feel will be more near $20,000, particularly on the north side of the street.

Itemized costs for the bridge include the following: Grading, $2,800; drainage, $2,000; pavement, $9,500; curbs and sidewalks, $4,200; bridge over railroad spur, $16,500, and removal of old bridge, $500.

This $40,000 estimate does not include costs for siding track alteration, for pipe conduits in canal bed, for borough water mains, for installation of car pulper equipment and land damages.

Work will begin within eight or ten weeks, it is estimated, and traffic will be diverted to Trenton avenue. Borough officials say that while the bridge is being lowered the Highway Department will also concrete Bridge street, from Pennsylvania avenue to Delmont avenue.

The new bridge will have a 36-foot roadway, with seven-foot sidewalk. Continued on Page Four

Funds Requested For 25 Armored Divisions

Washington, July 10—Congressional leaders said today that new money to be requested for the Army will include funds to give this country 25 armored divisions and to increase the Army plane program from 48,000 to 70,000 fighting airplanes.

The statement came after a White House announcement that Congress will be asked this week for the money, which, it is estimated, will be between five and six billion dollars for both the Army and increased aid to Britain under the lease-lend program.

Rep. Snyder, D. Pa., Chairman of the House Appropriations Military Subcommittee, said he has been informed by Army officials that they will ask for $4,500,000,000 for the land forces alone.

Amendments To Anti-Red Bill Are Passed

Harrisburg, July 10 — The House early today passed Democratic amendments to the Cordier-Kenehan anti-Red Bill after beating down Republican attempts to strengthen the measure.

The bill, which would ban from public payrolls all persons found guilty of un-American activities, was placed in final position for passage.

Russia's Resistance Quickens Flow of Supplies

Washington, July 10—American defense officials conceded today that Russia's stubborn resistance to German invaders is expected to accelerate the flow of strategic materials from the United States to the Soviet.

Conferees between Acting Secretary of State Welles and Soviet Ambassador Constantin Oumanski during the past few days are paving the way for substantial Russian orders of American machinery, equipment and petroleum products.

While Welles and Oumanski were discussing the broad, diplomatic aspects of American aid to Russia, representatives of the Soviet's Amtorg Trading Corporation were working out detailed purchasing proposals with State Department experts. At the conclusion of these meetings, Welles reported that the program of supplying certain materials to Russia was proceeding rapidly and efficiently.

The American Government's disposition to speed shipment of important materials to Russia stems from the fact that the Soviet war machine may prove tougher to the Nazis than had been anticipated.

McCRORY'S MODERN NEW STORE TO OPEN FRIDAY

Includes Addition Measuring 34x125 Feet; Now Has 74-Foot Frontage

HAS FINE APPOINTMENTS

The McCrory Stores Corporation, large operators of 5-10-25 cent stores, of which 59 are located in Pennsylvania, will open their palatial new Bristol store here tomorrow.

The "McCrory corner" has been a hive for the last few weeks, with scores of workmen, artists, stockroom clerks and salesgirls working in preparation for the opening of the most modern store of this type that could be had.

A new addition measuring 34 feet by 125 feet has been built adjacent to the store that has been here since 1928. The entire structure has been built according to the company's own plans and specifications.

The entire store now has a frontage of 74 feet on Mill street, with 11 windows for the display of merchandise. The window interiors are finished with ivory woodwork and mirrors which will add greatly to the attractiveness of the store front. The window lights are of the reflector type using only fifty 150-watt globes to light the front.

There are now four entrances on Mill street as well as one at the rear on Wood street. This entrance on Wood street will add to the shopping comfort of those patrons who park on Market or Wood streets.

SUPPORT AND LIQUOR CASES BEFORE COURT

Perkasie Machinist Ordered To Pay $15 Weekly To Wife and Daughter

NEGRO PLEADS GUILTY

DOYLESTOWN, July 10—"You have an exaggerated idea of your smartness and ability," President Judge Hiram H. Keller told Roy Zeigler, 26-year-old Perkasie machinist as he directed him to pay $15 a week toward the support of his wife, Eleanor and one child.

Zeigler, who earns $72 a week in a Philadelphia aviation plant, admitted that he had paid his wife but $6 since March 17th when he left her on a chicken farm near Perkasie, where he lost $1800 alone on feed on a short venture with raising chickens.

During the course of the hearing Zeigler's attorney, Donald B. Smith, of Perkasie, informed the court that he had one witness whom he would produce to show that Mrs. Zeigler had gone out with other men while her husband worked at night.

When the witness referred to took the stand, she said that she had no proof of anything concerning Mrs. Zeigler going out with other men. The witness was Miss Louise Hunsicker, 21, of Perkasie.

Zeigler also told Judge Keller that he had reason to believe that his wife had gone out with other men, but could not prove it.

Attorney Robert E. Grim, Perkasie, representing Mrs. Zeigler, well known in Perkasie, caustically replied to the charges of the defendant and his attorney. He described the accusation of unloyalty on the part of the husband as "unwarranted jealousy," and the Court added, "the whole trouble has been caused by gossip-mongering in your home community." Judge Keller also informed Zeigler that his manner on the stand did not impress the Court. Judge Keller told Zeigler that he had shown absolutely no good reason whatever for leaving his wife.

Zeigler said that he had a lot of bills to pay, including an $1800 feed bill on which he is paying $30 a week, a $270 bank note and a few other debts.

Mrs. Zeigler is employed in a Sellersville factory. Her husband told Judge Keller that he became suspicious one night when he came home from work earlier than usual—about 3:30 a. m.—and found his wife's roller skates on the living room floor with a Conshohocken rink advertisement attached. When he asked his wife if she Continued on Page Four

SERIAL NUMBERS ASSIGNED TO 209 REGISTRANTS HERE

Letter "S" Designates Difference Between This and Those of First Draft

CARDS ARE SHUFFLED

Thus Listing No. is Changed From Order in Which Men Registered

Serial numbers have been assigned to the 209 young men of this area, who on July 1st registered for selective service.

The assignment of numbers took place yesterday, after all cards of the registrants were thoroughly shuffled by members of the Bucks County Draft Board No. 1, located in Bristol post office building. To designate a difference in numbers between this group and those who registered one year ago, the letter "S" was placed before each number, starting with S-1.

Added to the 198 from the territory included in Draft Board No. 1, who during the past year reached their majority, were a few others, over-age, whose registration had been delayed for various reasons.

Within a short time the "national lottery" will take place in Washington, D. C., when the how famous fish-bowl will be used from which to draw the capsules. Thus those in this draft board area, as well as young men of 21 years from all over the country, will learn in what order they will be called to a year of army training.

SWEET SLEEP

Notwithstanding the stylist's confession that there is nothing new under the sun, it always comes as something of a surprise when archaeologists trace the history of a garment back thousands of years. So it is with pajamas, which Science Service reports were worn in Eastern Siberia 15,000 years ago.

Soviet archaeologists, it is reported, found at the village of Buret, near Irkutsk, a statuette of a woman of the Stone Age in night clothes fit for a 1941 fashion show.

It is suspected that the modern pajama wearer does not sleep as well of nights as did the maiden who served as a model for this statuette. By comparison with this era, the Stone Age, for all its reported rough ways, was serene. Then, indeed, were the good old days. Of the human race in this year, it may be said: Not poppy, nor mandragora

Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world

Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep

Which thou owdest yesterday.

So, though styles really do not change, the times do. And of all the times since Adam delved and Eve span these are probably the worst for sweet sleep and pleasant dreams. Even the Stone Age girls' pajamas do not help much.

SIBERIA

Serious attention is being devoted to the Pacific coast of Russia these days. Assuming a Russian breakdown, it follows that America will have a pro-axis neighbor across the Bering Strait.

What will transpire in Siberia if the Stalin government falls and Hitler takes charge in Moscow. The Nazis might be too much occupied with Britain to attempt to do anything in Siberia. Would Hitler stand for a Japanese grab of Siberia, laying the groundwork for a later German-Japanese war?

Probably not and Japan is logically interested only in the Mongolian part of Siberia and the northern half of Sakhalin Island. Best prospect would be for a Vichy-like Siberian regime the principal function of which would be to guard Vladivostok, the trans-Siberian railroad and such resources as might be found in that tremendous expanse of bleak terrain.

There would be rumors of fortifications on the Siberian Pacific and plans for military drives, perhaps against America. But years of transportation and naval transportation might be required before Siberia could become a springboard for conquest.

RED LETTER DAY

There is a sort of hocus-pocusing to Emerson's famous observation that it should be written in the heart that every day is the best day in the year. It may serve to get one off to a cheerful start on a dull morning, but will not stand up under research. A few red letter days invariably stand out.

Of the men who will mark this day down as the most blessed, not merely of the year but of this generation, are those on K. P. at Army camps throughout the nation. The automatic potato-peelers have arrived.

The headline writer who summarized this news in his terse manner by writing, "A Machine from Utopia for the Army," undoubtedly is in about his forty-eighth year and of good memory.

Some Unusual

Company Dishes

Here are two recipes for unusual dishes that are healthful dishes as well. Those who are seeking the various vitamins as well as calcium, will find these recipes of real interest. Oranges are rich in Vitamin C, that elusive vitamin that must be secured daily. They are also an excellent source of calcium—needed for bones and teeth. Try these new orange recipes:

Baked Orange Alaska
8 oranges
2 tablespoons grenadine syrup
2 egg whites
½ cup sugar
1 quart vanilla ice cream
Cut off tops of oranges. Carefully remove sections and mix with grenadine syrup. Refill orange cups with sections and chill thoroughly. Top with ice cream. Cover ice cream (to the very edges of the orange shells) with heavy meringue. Make meringue by beating egg whites until frothy; then adding sugar gradually while beating until mixture holds' peaks. Cover bottom of shallow pan with several layers of heavy wrapping paper. Place orange cups in pan and bake in very hot oven (500 degrees F.) for a few minutes (not more than five). Serve immediately. Serves eight.

Orange Refrigerator Cake
¾ cup Sunkist orange juice
1 tablespoon gelatin
1/3 cup sugar
½ cup boiling water
¾ cup orange juice
12 marshmallows
¼ cup orange pieces
1 cup whipping cream
24 ladyfingers or sponge cake
Soften gelatin in the ¾ cup orange juice. Add the sugar and boiling water. Stir to dissolve. Add ¾ cup orange juice. While gelatin mixture cools, combine marshmallows cut into bits, and orange pieces. When gelatin begins to stiffen, beat until fluffy. Fold in orange pieces, marshmallows and the whipped cream. Line a spring pan with waxed paper. Arrange a layer of ladyfingers or sponge cake on bottom and sides, with ladyfingers rounded side out. Pour in filling. Chill in refrigerator over-night. Unmold and garnish with whipped cream and orange sections. Serves eight.

What Christopher saw impelled him to retreat.

PUPPET LOVE by Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr.

SYNOPSIS

In all his twenty-four years, Christopher Allen Bishop had stood in awe of his family name and all it represented—bluebloods and millions! But today, he had gotten fed up with the whole artificial set-up, given up his $25-a-week "job," sent a farewell note to his aristocratic mother, and started out on his own in a roadster he had won in a radio contest. On the road to adventure, he picks up Joe Kane, a hitch-hiker. Against the latter's better judgment, they stop at a questionable luncheon where Christopher's pocket is picked. Christopher retrieves his wallet but a free-for-all ensues. After beating their attackers, the two boys speed out of town.

CHAPTER THREE

"Nothing like a light car for a quick get away," Christopher remarked cheerfully.

Joe whistled. "Boy, are you good! I guess it was the clothes and the way you talked. I kinda thought you were soft, but . . . can you toss knuckles?"

"It really wasn't a fair fight," Christopher commented, his heart still pounding. His breath scalded his throat but he wanted to sing. It took a real effort to talk calmly. "Not fair at all."

"I'll say it wasn't," Joe agreed. "but was it a beat while it lasted! One against four."

"But that's not what I mean," Christopher interrupted. "None of those chaps could fight, and they weren't in condition."

Joe gave a low moan. "And I gotta leave a guy like you in the next town!"

"Oh, I say, I'm terribly sorry. It's been swell traveling with you. I hope we meet up again."

They shook hands almost mournfully in the main street of Cressville which, as far as Christopher could observe, was but little improvement over the town they'd just left. But this was Joe's home and that distinguished it.

Joe, his hand on the car door, seemed to hesitate, as his free hand fingered something in an inner coat pocket.

Chris pulled a bill from his wallet. "You're just starting on a job—It might help, you know— You were a great help to me . . ." he was stammering, he who had been trained to pay and tip royally—if not always having the money with which to do so.

Joe saw the money and pulled back. "Nix on that! But, here," he pulled a card from his pocket and thrust it at Christopher. "This is where I'll be tomorrow. If you need a friend, just yell for Joe."

"Oh, I say . . ." Christopher stammered, but with a wavered salute, Joe was gone, leaving the Bishop scion studying an ornate card advertising "Kamp Kosy Komfort."

He'd only known Joe for an hour but he felt he'd made a friend. What a nice world!

Alone again, Christopher followed the road that skirted the river and finally led over a bridge. The contrast was startling. Behind him huddled the ugly little manufacturing town, before him was a charming residential section. Large white houses on board well-kept lawns, with good landscape gardening and a general air of well being and continued prosperity.

As he followed the road, the lawns became wider and the houses larger. These undoubtedly were the homes of the folks who owned the mills across the river. Contrast everywhere! Christopher was discovering America, discovering humanity, discovering the world.

Driving due west, the late afternoon sun gleamed directly into his eyes. He realized he was tired, his head ached annoyingly. The excitement of the day beat a myriad of small drums in his brain. To think that one brief day could hold so much . . . and it done yet. How could people be satisfied with their narrow, padded, protected lives when all this throbbing exciting existence was outside their doors—doors they opened only to the best names in their padded circle?

Christopher thought of Uncle Neddy—Edward Crofton Bishop in the Social Register—who inclined a sympathetic if slightly apologetic cheek toward his nephew when the latter was floundering in perplexities. At least Uncle Neddy always understood despite the things his sister-in-law said about him. As for running Christopher's morals, as she warned, Neddy's morals, or lack of them, were strictly his own and to be shared by no one.

"My dear boy," Uncle Neddy would say from the depths of his favorite chair in the club, "if a man hasn't sufficient initiative and in-melody he recognized as "Blue Danube." A good amateur musician with a nice ear for harmony, he tried to trace the melody through this peculiar bleating noise. "Da—dada da . . ."

The music stopped and Christopher drew a sigh of relief; but the torturing of the melody was soon resumed. It was more than Christopher could bear. He locked the car and stepped out. His wrist watch said 4:15. It was good to stretch his legs. He needed exercise and that musician needed guidance.

The sound came from the general direction of the corner property that was bordered by a high privet hedge. How utterly selfish of people to hide their gardens behind such fences! Then he remembered the barbed wire fence supporting miles of barberry that bordered the Bishop's Long Island place. Even the road leading to it was marked "Private."

The entrance to this place was

What Christopher saw impelled him to retreat.

iquity to design his own road to ruin, he deserves to be saved."

But with his new view of the world, it was not Uncle Neddy's past but his present that Christopher condemned. How could a man of means even at sixty be satisfied to view life from the depth of a leather chair, and through the plate glass windows of the club and the rosy haze of a long succession of drinks?

Edward Crofton Bishop hadn't left New York for ten years—not since he discovered that Gus, the club barman, could blend the perfect Fifth Avenue—a cocktail of Uncle Neddy's own design.

Christopher wondered what Joe would say about that. He liked Joe. Thinking about him brought back the warm glow of companionship—a new and pleasurable experience. Joe was ready for anything. He—

A faint, somewhat wheezy melody cut through Christopher's thoughts. For a second, he couldn't be sure whether it really was a melody or the long drawn out squeal of bad brakes. He had been driving along slowly, his head bent, eyes on the road to shield them from the sun. He was at the intersection of a short road that ended perforce at the river drive. He slid the car to a stop and listened.

It was music, though there should have been another name for it. The not nearly so remote, being clearly marked by two low stone pillars half a block from the main highway. As Christopher strode along the line of the hedge he heard the murmur of voices and occasional laughter punctuated by that strange, asthmatic music. His curiosity increased as he turned into the drive. Then he stopped abruptly.

This drive was obviously the tradesmen's entrance. The hedge bordered a wide sweep of lawn, a good acre at least, with a fine old house set back among tall trees. At the rear of the house the land sloped to a sizable farm, and between the house and out buildings, dozens of cars were parked.

The lawn was dotted with gay booths; girls in Dresden shop herdess costumes fluttered about, selling cigarettes, candies and chances to other women and a small scattering of men.

All this Christopher saw in two glances. What he saw in the third glance impelled him to retreat. It was a white streamer, lettered in red:

Cause us to be ever mindful, O God, of the trials and sufferings of others. Open our eyes that we might behold the tremendous need existing around the world today. To Build Lower Span Over Canal At Morrisville are on both sides. Under the bridge, where the spur track runs, the vertical clearance will be 12 feet, with a horizontal clearance of 14 feet. The grade on the easterly section of the approach will be 3.13 per cent and .467 on the westerly approach.

Borough officials point out that the new bridge will be just about three feet above a straight roadway. It will be a great aid to traffic passing through the borough and relieve congestion along this hazardous point, but authorities here also point out that it will necessitate putting several properties below the road level by virtue of the longer ramps and diminish possibility of further business expansion along the sector. Costs for the entire improvements are also too great, it is felt here.

Morrisville officials tried unsuccessfully to have the bridge removed and a grade crossing established but, were over-ruled on every occasion by the State.

had been to Conshohocken skating, she admitted it but did not say with whom—except "friends."

George Stewart Harding, Feasterville, pleaded guilty before Judge Keller to stealing some asphalt, shingles and other building materials. He was sentenced to pay the costs and serve 30 days to one year in the County Prison.

William Vanlunee, Doylestown, was before Judge Keller on a desertion and non-support order. Mrs. Lillian Vanlunee informed Judge Keller that her husband, who was before the Court last January, when it was suggested that he get a job and pay his wife and two children $5 a week, had not paid a cent.

"It seems very funny that you cannot get a job, the trouble is you do not want to work," the Court replied. District Attorney Edward G. Blester informed the Court that when the family was living together, Vanlunee's children would have to get their father out of bed at noon, and that he would not work then.

Judge Keller made an order of $3 a week for each child and held Vanlunee under $500 bond, and to stand committed until the order is paid. Vanlunee was taken to the Bucks County prison after the hearing.

Mrs. Vanlunee told Judge Keller that she pays $40 a month rent and that she needs support.

One of the "last drips" of the old Bucks county moonshine whiskey cases was heard in court here yesterday when Robert McClain, 38, Negro, Philadelphia, was before the Court on a charge of unlawful manufacture and possession of intoxicating liquor. McClain was recently released from the Federal Penitentiary at Lewisburg where he served two years, nine months and 24 days for his part in the operation of a 1000-gallon still near Sellersville in 1939. McClain was turned over to the Bucks county authorities last week. He pleaded guilty in the Federal Court for being in possession of untaxed liquor. McClain was at the still just one day when he was arrested. The still had been started but a few hours before he got the job. Judge Keller suspended sentence and placed McClain on probation for one year.

Picnic Lunch Is Favorite In Summer

Variety of Ways To Use Meat Loaf In Hot Weather

Although meat loaves have no special season and are good at any time of the year, they can be of special help in solving summer menu problems, as many homemakers have discovered. For instance, they are fine to have on hand for sandwich fillings at this season, when sandwiches are in great demand for picnics, quick lunches or between-meal snacks. A meat loaf, which is so good when piping hot from the oven, loses none of that goodness when it becomes cold.

It is easy to slice a firm, fine textured meat loaf into neat and even portions to go between slices of white or whole wheat bread. A crisp leaf of lettuce or a thin slice of cheese can be placed over it, or it can spread with mustard.

Or, if you are picnic-bound, you can wrap up the meat loaf just as it comes from the oven, and carry it with you in the pan in which it was baked. Hot foods are relished at out-door meals just as much as at home. With bread and butter sandwiches, potato chips, radishes, pickles, an assortment of little cakes, bananas or apples or other fruits, you will have as well balanced and nutritious a meal as any you could serve at home.

Flavor is important in a meat loaf, and wide variety is possible in the kinds of meat used and in other ingredients added. Here are two unusually well flavored loaves, suggested by Inez S. Willson, home economist.

Horseshoe Meat Loaf

2 pounds ground beef
1 pound ground pork
1/4 cup grated onion
1/2 cup horseradish
1 teaspoon mustard
2 eggs
1 cup cracker crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup tomato catsup

Mix all ingredients except the catsup. Pack into well-greased loaf pan. Cover the top with the tomato catsup. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for one hour.

Mushroom Ham Loaf

1 pound ground smoked ham butt
1 pound ground veal shoulder
4 tablespoons catsup
3 tablespoons minced green pepper
1 tablespoon grated onion
2 eggs
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/4 cup fine cracker or bread crumbs
1 cup condensed mushroom soup
16 button mushrooms

Combine ingredients thoroughly in order given. Pack half the mixture into a loaf pan, press whole mushrooms (raw or canned) into center. Add remaining meat mixture, press whole mushrooms into top layer. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for one and one-half hours. Serve hot or cold.

Serving Hints Will Improve Meal's Looks

After planning and preparing food well, the final step is to serve it in dainty fashion. Good meals are worthy of an attractive setting, and that isn't hard these days when pretty china and colorful table linens are obtainable at very moderate cost.

However, there are easy and quick ways of serving and it isn't necessary to make hard work of this phase of food preparation.

One of the easy ways of serving food is an adaptation of the restaurant fashion of "plate" meals. The main portion of the meal, meat and vegetables and sometimes a salad or fruit accompaniment, is arranged neatly on each plate in the kitchen. Foods which go well together in appearance as well as flavor are chosen for this service.

Foods to be served this way should not contain too much liquid. Meats which are cooked in individual servings—chops, skewered meats, beef and veal "birds," sausage links, frankfurters, and so on are conveniently served this way. French fried potatoes and potato chips go well with them. Ramekins or patty shells may be used for creamed vegetables.

Here are two recipes, suggested by Inez S. Willson, home economist, for meat dishes to be served as part of "plate" dinners.

Skewered Veal Cubes

2 pounds veal shoulder
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper
1 tablespoon butter
2 eggs
2 cups cornflakes
3 tablespoons lard

Have veal shoulder cut into one-inch cubes and threaded onto skewers. Mix mustard, salt, pepper and butter together and rub on the skewered veal. Dip in slightly beaten eggs, then in crushed cornflakes. Brown on all sides in hot lard or bacon drippings. Add one-fourth cup hot water, cover tightly and cook very slowly for about 30 minutes.

Broiled Stuffed Frankfurters

1 pound frankfurters
Prepared mustard
1/4 pound American cheese
1/4 pound bacon
Split the frankfurters lengthwise and spread the cut surface with mustard. Place a strip of cheese in the slit and wrap the frankfurter with a slice of uncooked bacon. Fasten with a toothpick. Place on a rack in a broiling oven so that the frankfurters are about 3 inches from the source of heat. Turn frequently. Broil until the bacon is crisp and the cheese melted. Serve with hot potato salad.

Most Nearly Perfect Food

Milk is rich in food elements and vitamins necessary for good nutrition. Yet every mother knows how hard it is to induce the children to drink a quart each day, or the adults, a pint. Some are willing but many refuse.

Why not transform milk into delicious easily-digested rennet-custards? These tempting desserts are a welcome change from plain milk, and yet you will be serving milk in a form that both children and grown-ups will appreciate.

Here are two recipes that will be particularly pleasing right now when the temperature is high:

Chocolate Mint Rennet-Custard

1 package chocolate rennet powder
1 pint milk, ordinary or homogenized
1/2 cup chocolate syrup
1/2 cup marshmallow topping
Few drops peppermint flavoring

ing

Make rennet-custards according to directions on package. Then chill in refrigerator. When ready to serve, mix marshmallow topping, chocolate syrup and a few drops of peppermint flavoring together thoroughly. Put on top of each rennet-custard and serve at once.

Apricot Chocolate Rennet-Custard

1 package chocolate rennet powder
1 pint milk, ordinary or homogenized

ODD FELLOWS BATTLE
EDGELY TO TIE SCORE;
FINAL COUNT, 3 TO 3

Clubs Play Extra Inning in An Effort to Break The Deadlock

SULLIVAN VS. BACHOFER

Both Pitchers Perform Well
On the Mound for Their Respective Teams

EDGELY, July 10.—The Odd Fellows and the Edgely A. C. battled to a 3-3 deadlock last evening on the Edgely diamond. The clubs played an extra inning in an effort to decide the winner but both clubs failed to score in the eighth.

The left-handed "Eddie" Sullivan and "Pinky" Bachofer hooked up in a pitching battle, both giving up five safe bingles. Sullivan had nine strikeouts to his credit. Sullivan walked one batter, Bachofer, three. Of the five hits made by the Edgely team, both Bill Leigh and VanLenten had a pair each while Henny Morrell led the Oddies with the stick, getting a triple and single.

Sullivan was invincible after the first inning. In this canto he was rapped for the trio of failures scored by the Edgelyites. Two errors aided the Edgely boys to score on this frame. The miscues were made by Clifton and Bisphan and had hits by Linck and Leigh sandwiched between.

Morrell's triple accounted for an Odd Fellows run in the first while a hit by Bisphan, a fielder's choice, and an error gave the Radcliffe Streeters another marker in the second. The deadlocking run was not scored until the sixth when Black committed an error, a long fly, and a hit by Hibbs enabled Morrell to score.

Both clubs had opportunities to score in the extra canto. Bachofer was wild and passed Sullivan and Hibbs but these could not be advanced. In the Edgely half, VanLenten hit safely and then stole second but Leigh and DeKoyler went out to end the inning.

DIAMOND NINE TIES
VOLTZ-TEXACO TEAM

Frankie Balaz did his best to help the Diamond team to a victory last evening on Landreth's field, but his efforts were a little in vain as the score finally ended in a tie, 4-4. The Diamond and Voltz-Texaco teams divided the eighteen hits made in the contest.

Balaz drove in three of the Diamond's markers with a double and two singles. Only the fact that Yeager was nailed at the plate on his third hit prevented him from being credited with another R. B. I. which would have enabled Diamond to win the tilt.

If "Hal" Shackleton had devised a way to get Balaz out, he would have sailed to an easy triumph. Shackleton pitched well enough, especially in the pinches. Of the nine hits he allowed, five were credited to Balaz and Yeager, the latter a former Temple University player. Shackleton was in hot water several times during the contest but always managed to pull through unscathed.

A bad break prevented Gene Ashton from capturing the contest. Gene pitched a ball to Danny Mazzillo's liking in the sixth and the Voltz-Texaco catcher promptly dumped it into center for a double. A wild pitch advanced Mazzillo to third. The "squeeze" signal was given and Mazzillo came tearing for the plate but Shackleton missed the bunt try and Clay tagged out the runner but then dropped the ball and Mazzillo had counted the tying marker.

Tazik, Kondyra and Mazzillo played good ball defensively for the Voltz team while outstanding for the Diamondians were Clay and Harker.
